WEST LAFAYETTE, Indiana (WLFI) - Former Boilermaker basketball star Carl Landry is back in West Lafayette this week to host his 3rd annual Carl Landry Basketball Camp at West Lafayette High School.

Landry says the core mission of the Carl Landry Basketball Camp is to provide the foundation for young children to use basketball as a way to achieve greatness.

Seventy campers enrolled in this years camp which is for all ages and skill levels. With help from members of the Purdue basketball family, Landry always enjoys coming back and seeing how much the kids have improved.

"I'm just hoping that each kid takes something day by day, and hopefully by the end of this camp have learned something. Not only for basketball, but we have speakers every day and just take something from this camp that will last them a lifetime," said Landry.

"No matter what it is, if it's being a teacher, a lawyer, a doctor, if you want to be a firefighter, anything, a basketball player or a football player. The importance of being successful is starting in school. Obviously, you need to have a certain GPA just to get to college, so the importance of working hard in school and having a good attitude is what we focus on in this camp," said Landry.

"I look forward to seeing the little kids, and also the big kids. Just watching them compete it is fun," said Landry.
